One-size does not fit all – The sad reality of the Indian Regulatory Regime – Analysis of the applicability of various laws and how it pans out, if made applicable to small businesses

Imagine you have worked out the best recipe ever for homemade chocolate chip cookies. They taste heavenly – not just to you and your mom, but to everyone else you have shared them with – including some food bloggers and chefs. You do some rudimentary market research and find that if you can keep the price reasonable these cookies could sell like hot cakes! You beg, borrow and steal – mostly borrow – just about enough to start a factory to make a few thousand cookies every week. You think you are ready for business, when a lawyer friend asks you an innocuous question: “Hey, have you sorted out your compliance requirements?” And, with that the cookie crumbles!...Read More
